PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

20+ years of global B2B Technology Marketing spanning Field Marketing, Demand Generation, ABM, Executive Engagement, Partner Marketing, GTM and Regional Marketing. Career evolved from program execution to shaping market priorities and GTM strategy in close partnership with Sales and business leadership.

At Zebra Technologies, led Korea & Philippines marketing programs — building demand generation, ABM, executive engagement and partner initiatives connecting global priorities with local market needs. A 15-month Singapore APAC assignment expanded scope into regional strategy and scalable programs across six APAC markets.

Strength: market building in ambiguous environments — turning open questions into clear priorities, translating strategy into executable workstreams, and scaling what works from 0→1 to 1→10.

ABOUT ME

I am a B2B technology marketer who takes ownership of the work — from the first question to the final business result.

I care about doing the work properly. Before I plan any program, I try to understand the business goal, the customer and what Sales really needs. When the direction is not fully clear, I don't wait for a perfect answer. I ask the right questions, set clear priorities and take a practical first step.

Attitude toward work. I treat every program — large or small — as if it were my own business. I prepare carefully, keep my promises to Sales and partners, and stay honest about what is working and what is not. When something goes wrong, I don't look for excuses; I look for the reason and fix it.

Ownership & responsibility. For many years I worked as the only marketer for my markets, so I planned, executed, measured and improved programs myself. That taught me to follow through. I look at what happens after a lead goes to Sales, not just how many leads Marketing created — and I keep improving a program until it delivers.

Passion for building. I genuinely enjoy building things. My most rewarding work started without a playbook: a demand generation engine for Korea, a field event turned into a yearly revenue platform, and a single-market idea that grew into a six-market APAC program. When something works, I make it repeatable so the whole team can use it.

Professional expertise. Twenty years at Dassault Systèmes, Cisco, Schneider Electric and Zebra have given me deep, hands-on expertise in demand generation, ABM, executive engagement and partner marketing. I know Korea's enterprise technology market well and can connect global strategy with local reality. I also keep learning — today I use AI tools such as Claude and ChatGPT to research, plan and execute faster.

Trust & collaboration. Good marketing happens between people. I work closely with Sales, regional teams and partners, listen to their priorities, and earn trust through clear communication and consistent results — even without formal authority.

Always learning. Some of my biggest growth came from difficult moments — when Sales was not ready, a partner had different priorities, or my first plan simply did not work. Each time, I stopped, listened and adjusted. I bring the same curiosity and energy to every new market, team and challenge.

I may not have every answer on day one, but I will take responsibility for finding it, testing it and making it work.

OPERATING PRINCIPLES

Proven in Practice

I don't wait for clarity. I create it.

As the sole regional marketer for Korea and the Philippines, there was no existing playbook — the demand generation model was built while it was being run.

Marketing is momentum, not activity.

$5.36M in direct-sourced closed-won revenue came from treating marketing as a pipeline discipline connected to Sales — not a calendar of campaigns.

Strategy earns its value in execution.

The Automation World platform mattered because it was operationalized every year — inquiry capture, sales handoff and compounding pipeline contribution, not a one-time campaign.

Great GTM happens between functions.

Regional strategy, local execution, Sales and partners only move together when someone connects them — that connective role is where most of this career has been spent.

“

B2B marketer — deep market understanding, fast execution, focused on pipeline and business outcomes.

Know the market. Move fast. Create sales conversations.
